

Nathan, our travel consultant from New York, told us that visiting a lavender field in Provence would be an extraordinary experience he was right! The scent filled the air and we were even able to visit a local perfume factory. I bought a bottle so I can have that memory of France with me always.