PROJECT RUNWAY STARS IN THAILAND ?

STORY OF THE DAY

Any self respecting fashionista knows silk is the crown jewel of textiles, but how much do you know about those little critters who are munching on millions of mulberry leaves every day just so they can spin out that beautiful scarf you're wearing, huh? The Four Seasons Tented Camp in Thailand's Golden Triangle has launched a new program to assist the care and conservation of the Golden Triangle Asian Elephant Foundation.

Guests can spend a day seeing how one silk worm can produce one thread from 1,000 to 3,000 feet long and then take home one of the intricate shawls produced by local artists. Afterwards take a ride on one of the property's elephants through lush tropical paths. If you can't make the trip, you can still buy one of the shawls online. SIDEBAR

Now you don't even have to wait till you get home to display your travel photos. Vizit is a two-way communication, fully interactive digital photo frame that enables users to send and receive digital photos over the mobile network. The cost? $249, plus monthly subscription with mobile carrier. www.isabellaproducts.com

Better instant gratification but still a bit pricey

SIDEBAR

Everyone told you not to drink the water, but did you listen? Suddenly finding yourself sick during a trip doesn't have to cost you a small fortune. eHealthInsurance has launched a new product where someone can literally get covered instantaneously from their cell phone! The whole process is completed on a cell—from application to approval. www.eHealthInsurance.com/m/
